

On high I dwell, and in holiness, and with the crushed and dejected in spirit, to revive the spirits of the dejected, to revive the hearts of the crushed.

The Lord God has anointed me and has sent me to bring Good News to the poor to give them the oil of gladness.

Upon you the Lord shines and over you appears his Glory!

FEBRUARY 11: XXV World Day of the Sick

You Teach People How To Treat You.

Phillip McGraw says it powerfully: You teach people how to treat you. I realize now that some of my friends taught their parents to be controlling. And I taught my parents to give me all the freedom in the world.

How? I was boringly predictable!

As a young guy, I basically obeyed them everyday. I came home at the time they wanted me to come home, I did my assigned responsibilities, and I loved God with all my heart! I was so boringly predictable, my parents could predict what I would say if a friend gave me a cigarette ("No, thank you. I love my lungs.") or when a stranger would offer me drugs ("No, thank you. I love my brain.").

Hey, this principle works in any relationship, so adults, listen to me.

Do you feel that your boss in the office is treating you unfairly?

Has your husband been verbally abusing you for ten years now?

Do you feel that your friends totally ignore you?

Let me give you a bitter pill to swallow: Partly, you created their response towards you. You taught them how to treat you.

About that boss that is unfairly treating you—just MAYBE, you showed a negative attitude in the office and your boss is responding with hostility.

About that verbally abusing husband—just MAYBE, you made your husband think it's acceptable behavior that he maltreat you because you tolerate it again and again.

About the friends who totally ignore you—just MAYBE, they're simply respecting the wall you've erected around you.

Stop blaming others.

Take responsibility.

*Now go change your life.
