How long is Jesus present in the host?

I was taught that Jesus is present in the consecrated host only for about fifteen minutes. Is that true?

Alfred

Dear Alfred,

No. Our Church teaches that by the words of Christ and the invocation of the Holy Spirit, the bread and wine offered at Mass become Christ's Body and Blood (Catechism of the Catholic Church, 1333). Classically, we use the language of transubstantiation to describe this change: While the sensed characteristics like taste, smell, and feel of the bread and wine remain the same, their substance or essence changes through God's grace so that they really are the Body and Blood of Christ. Christ is present within them—body, blood, soul, and divinity—and no time limit is associated with this Real Presence.

We keep the Blessed Sacrament reserved in our tabernacles (the locked boxes where the priest places uneaten consecrated hosts after Communion) because we believe in this ongoing presence of Christ, and we want to show adequate reverence for the Lord's sacramental presence in our midst. The abiding presence of Christ in the consecrated hosts allows us to carry the Blessed Sacrament to the sick and the homebound long after the celebration of Mass.

The presence of Christ in the Blessed Sacrament also provides us with a focal point for our prayer and understanding of Christ's abiding presence whenever we walk into or pass by a church where the Blessed Sacrament is reserved.

MOST HOLY BODY AND BLOOD OF CHRIST

Dt 8:2-3, 14b-16a / 1 Cor 10:16-17 / Jn 6:51-58

My house is a veritable Museum of Bread Makers. Before our marriage, I knew my husband loved to make bread, but I didn't know about his penchant for accumulating electric bread makers. They seem to magically appear in our home, as do the loaves of bread. Coming home to the smell of fresh bread, I discover not one, not two, but three loaves on the counter. The biblical multiplication of the loaves occurs in our kitchen regularly.

Ron is also a bread aficionado at work. He's known for baking fresh loaves in his office bread maker just in time for that midafternoon slump. The wafting aroma of fresh bread draws everyone out of their offices to share butter-slathered slices. Even the most calorie conscious can't seem to resist a healthy slice of warm, doughy goodness.

Bread has that effect—it brings people together. The bread and wine we share in the Eucharist do the same, as we hear in Paul's letter today: "Because the loaf of bread is one, we, though many, are one body, for we all partake of the one loaf."

The Eucharist not only profoundly unites us with God, but it also binds humankind. One of my most powerful liturgical experiences is watching the community procession to receive the bread of life and the cup of salvation. Everyone brings forward individual joys, burdens, gifts, and brokenness, with open hands and mouths, to receive the Lord's nourishment. Through the Eucharist, we are deeply united, all coming in need of God and each other.

The next time you celebrate the Eucharist, take a moment to experience that connection. Then let that unity flow through the church doors—into the parking lot, into the workplace, into your neighborhood. Be a bread maker, bringing people together with the nourishing love of God.
