TWENTY-SEVENTH SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME

Hb 1:2-3; 2:2-4 / 2 Tm 1:6-8, 13-14 Lk 17:5-10

I'm not the world's bravest person. When I got to college, I was delighted that I no longer had to go on roller coasters or into haunted houses to avoid my friends' mocking for being afraid. My college buddies didn't base our friendship on whether I went along with the crowd. I could say, "No, I really dislike coasters and haunted houses. See you when you get done!" It was liberating.

Life is full of much scarier things than amusement-park rides and fake goblins. We hear the prophet Habakkuk speak of some of it in today's first reading. Evil, violence, strife, destruction—add to that cancer, natural disasters, Alzheimer's, domestic abuse, and unemployment, and sometimes it can take a lot of courage just to get up in the morning.

As a person who's more fearful than most, I take hope in St. Paul's reminder to Timothy today: "God did not give us a spirit of cowardice, but rather of power and love and self-control." Feeling afraid is a normal human emotion, but it's not what God wants for us, and it isn't part of the spirit God gives us. As St. Paul reminds us, the Holy Spirit "dwells within us." The Spirit is the source of our daily strength; the Spirit can get us out of bed when all feels lost; the Spirit helps us persist in the face of incredible challenges.

Do we have faith in this Holy Spirit—faith at least the size of a miniscule mustard seed? If so, it's enough. With such faith, we will experience the courage to face our fears and to trust that God is with us through them all.
