Pastoral Reflection: 23rd Sunday Gospel- Luke 14, 25-33 / Choices

On a wall hangs a sign that says, "Life is a choice, choose well." To be more particular about it, life is a series of choices, some big and some small. Our life is the result of the choices we make. We are responsible for the direction of our life.

Our choices make us what we are. We therefore have to be deliberate well on important matters. Nothing could be more important than the choice to follow Christ. This was the point that Jesus was making with His disciples in this Sunday's Gospel, He told them two parables. When one decides to build a tower he must first make sure he has the resources to finish it, otherwise people will make fun of him when he leaves behind a half-completed structure. The second parable is about a king about to make war on another. According to the rules of the day, the antagonists may negotiate on terms peace before the battle begins. If a ruler sees that he cannot win the war, he can negotiate for the lives of his people, rather than the city be wiped out. When one claims to be a disciple of Jesus, he must face the consequences of discipleship, "Those who do not carry their own cross and come after me cannot be my disciples" (Lk. 14:27). Jesus becomes the ultimate standard. He becomes number one. Everything else takes second place - our loved ones, our families, even our own life. The challenge is clearly stated, "Those who come to me cannot be my disciples unless they love me more than they love father and mother, wife and children, brothers and sisters, and themselves as well"(v.26) Among some of our evangelical brothers and sisters, to be "born again" refers to the moment when they made the decision to commit their lives to Christ. Those who have been baptized in their adult years and who have gone through the process of instructions as catechumens know fully well the consequences of their baptism. Many of us who have been baptized as infants and received confirmation as teenagers may have to look more deeply into the state of our discipleship and its serious consequences. For this reason, the Church provides us with the ritual of renewal of baptismal promises at the Easter liturgy. In this annual rite, we confirm our choice to follow Christ.

A prayer that Charlie DeLeo wrote, sums up the challenge of today's Scripture readings:

O Lord, I don't ever expect to have the faith of Abraham,

Nor do I, O Lord, ever expect to have the leadership of Moses,

Nor the strength of Samson, nor the courage of David ... nor the wisdom of Solomon ...

But what I do expect, O Lord, is your calling on me some day.

What is your will, I shall do, what is your command shall be my joy ...

And I shall not fail you, O Lord, for you are all I seek to serve.
