Twenty-Sixth Sunday in Ordinary Time: September 29th

The sin of the rich man in today's parable was not that he was rich, but that he failed to share his wealth with the beggar at his gate. He knew Lazarus, perhaps walked by him every time he came in or out, but did nothing to relieve his suffering. Is there a Lazarus in my life? What am I doing to help?

TWENTY-SIXTH SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME

Am 6:1a, 4-7 / 1 Tm 6:11-16 / Lk 16:19-31

My husband and I have been married more than three years—most of the time, happily. Occasionally a disagreement morphs into an argument, which sometimes turns into an actual fight. When we eventually apologize and recommit to each other, my husband often reminds us that when we married we didn't enter into a contract—we committed to a covenant. In a contract, the parties focus on "what's in it for me"; in a covenant, each party actively works toward the other's good. When we treat our marriage like a contract instead of a covenant, our relationship suffers.

Today's readings from Amos and St. Luke challenge our commitment to our covenant bond. The Israelites were in covenant relationship with God, meaning they had responsibilities to God as well as one another. Unfortunately, the people in the readings didn't heed the covenant—the rich in Amos' time were oblivious and complacent; the man in the gospel was aware of Lazarus, but he did nothing to help him.

We too are covenanted with God and God's children. We aren't just people who happen to be along for the ride to heaven; as a result of the covenant, we have responsibilities to actively care for one another, especially those in need.

It's about more than just occasionally handing money to a homeless person. It's also about consciously incorporating this active care more deeply into our lives—into our purchases, our political activism, our career choices, our free time.

The work of our covenant bond can't be an afterthought. As in a healthy marriage, it must be at the heart of our relationship with others and with God.
